John J. Clancy, a candidate
of the labor party
ago, worked dili-
to have the creek dredged and open-
Mr.
Clancy purchased land on the Williamsburg side of the creek, and built a dock.
He employed men who dredged the creek, and he had several canal boats loaded with coal brought to his wharf. While the boats were at the dock, and before the last consignment was removed from them, the creek, which had been dredged, filled in again, and as the expense of dredging it again was too much for one person to bear, the boats and dock were abandoned, and small boys soon made short work of them by setting them afire.

At Berry street an open sewer from Greenpoint flows into the creek, and the fact that the sewer is uncovered and has been for two years, has given rise to the impression that an epidemic of disease is liable to break out at any time. The foul smells on a damp or rainy night are unbearable.

The business men and property owners who are most interested in the dredging or filling in of Bushwick Creek are Messrs.
Popham, Frieberg, Lawson, John J. Clancy, Daniel Hart, Henry Vogt,
John Fallon, M. L. Stanton,
J. H. Paul, and others.

They have drawn up a petition, but the next petition will be, and they have hopes that objects may be accomplished.

In Williamsburg and in the Bushwick remember well what stream Bushwick Creek was years ago. Its course was a straight line, covering over two miles, a half-mile wide. Boat-houses were used for fishing and swimming.
Its banks, a sand beach, a ground, and those old trees saying in Bushwick Creek, those clear as the water of Lake was an abundance of fish when an oil well disappeared, the fish disappeared, and was not at its best.

"This is only a friendly suit. I declined a compromise because I wanted to have the courts settle the matter."

SPILLED HIS GOOD LOOKS.

Mrs. Leizgreto Used a Carving Knife, While Her Husband Wielded a Sword.

John Leizgreto lives in the Italian colony, in Tillary street, Brooklyn. He is—or was —a rather handsome fellow, and he won the heart of Mamie Mahoney, a very pretty girl, about a year ago. Yesterday John and his wife were in the Myrtle Avenue Police Court, the latter as a prisoner on the former's complaint. John's face was cut and swollen. He said Mamie had attacked him with a carving knife Thursday night.
Mamie said she quarreled with John in their home, at No. 231 Tillary street. He attacked her with a sword, and she used the knife to defend herself. She was held.

Parsons's Queer Conduct.

George Parsons, a resident of Steinway, was locked up in the Second Precinct Station House in Astoria yesterday to await an examination as to his sanity. He is employed by a New York wholesale grocery house. The shipyard of P. W. Ward are situated in Astoria, and Parsons went through the yards yesterday and into the private office. He took off his hat and coat, and Mr. Ward at first thought him an employee. Then Parsons seized a stool and attacked Mr. Ward. School Trustee James McMahon was present, and he seized Parsons. Policeman Schroeder was called in and arrested the man. The latter had never seen Ward before.

Will Purify Brooklyn Water.

City Works Commissioner Willis, of Brooklyn, said yesterday he would begin at once the work of purifying the water supply.

FALL FURNITURE FACTS

Few stores have so excellent a showing of fine new FURNITURE and CARPETS as ours. None have a larger stock, and the prices are trimmed down to suit the times. We invite present and prospective housekeepers to inspect our store, where both goods and prices are vying with each other in temptingsness.

To those requiring credit we will willingly extend it on the easiest terms, and times of SICKNESS or SLACKNESS of work are VALID excuses with us for delayed payments. You can't be treated better anywhere. Just to emphasize the store offerings—look at this:
